WEEKEND AT BERNIE'S

THE SEQUEL NOBODY WANTED

According to Karem, multiple other sources – “including a few inside Trump’s administration” – have also started referring to the current administration as “Weekend at Bernie’s,” a reference to the 1989 comedy about two employees propping up their dead boss’s corpse to convince others he’s still alive.

“This administration is dead in the water,” another GOP lawmaker told Karem.

The state of Trump’s health has fueled speculation among critics, many of whom point to what appear to be instances of the president dozing off during cabinet meetings with growing frequency. The president has also been seen with bruising on his hands, swollen ankles and a rash on his neck.

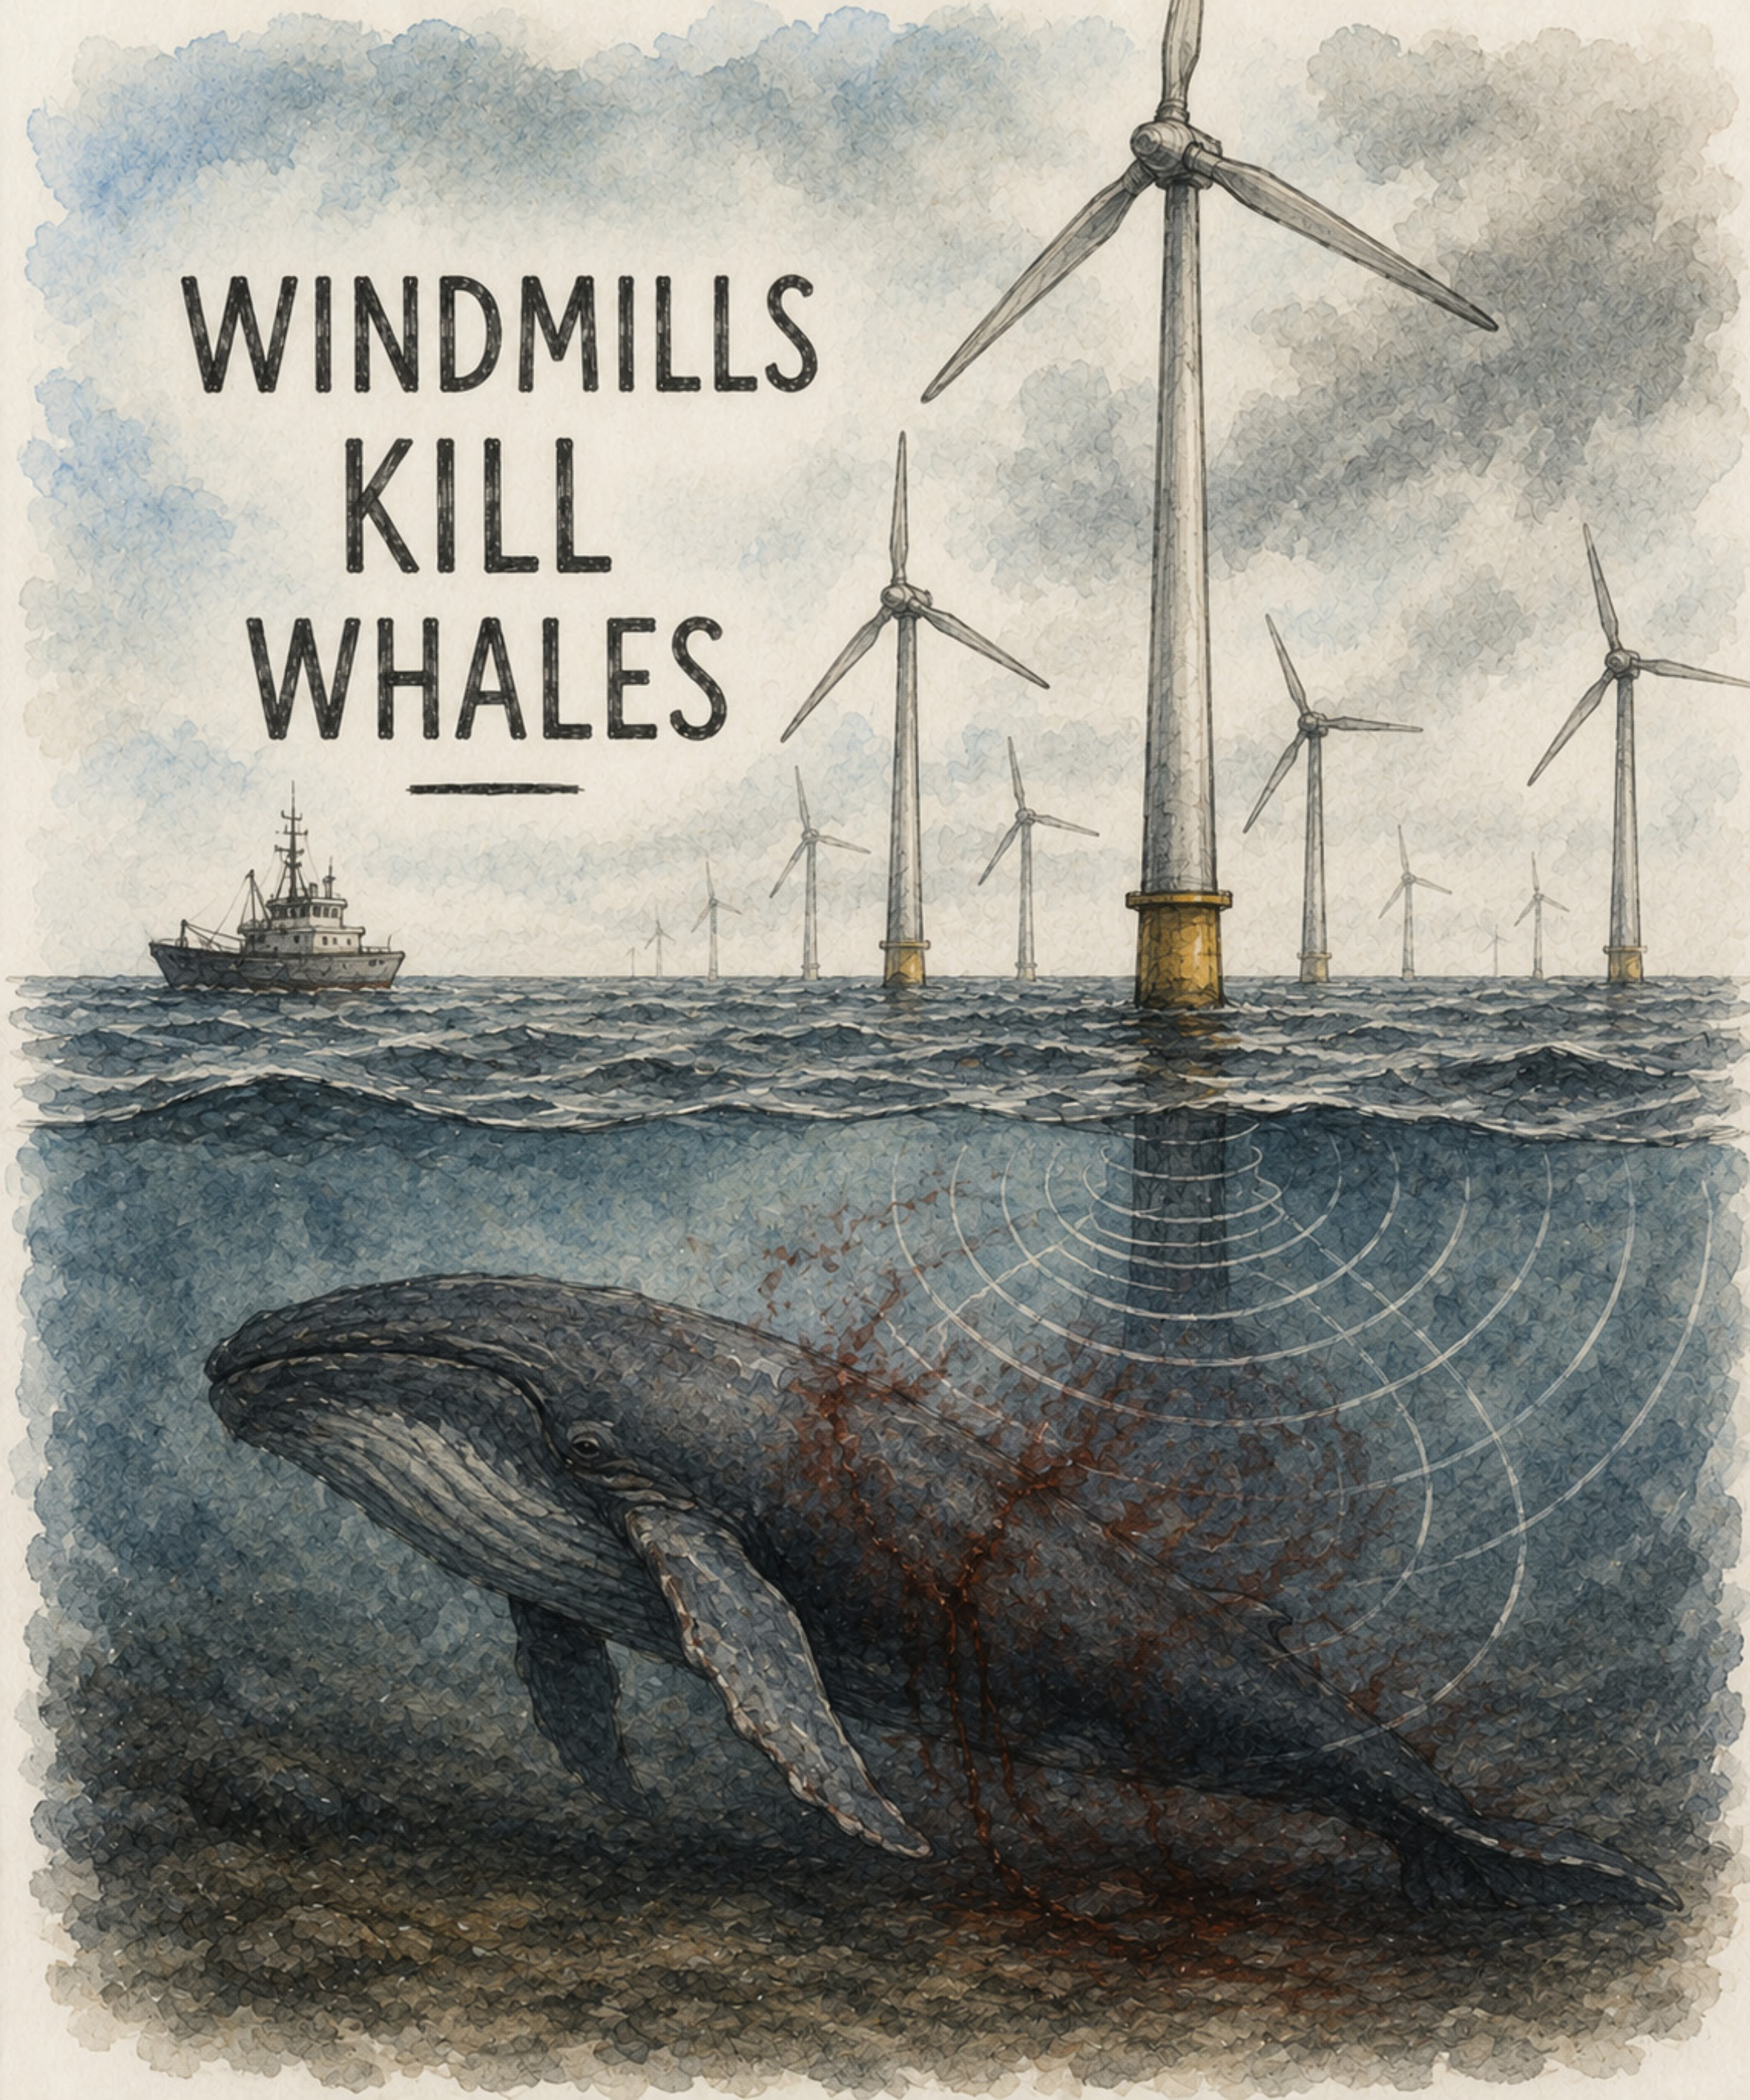

Regarding the state of Trump’s cognitive health, Iranian officials genuinely believed the president was “legitimately mentally ill,” and as such, had recruited the help of “senior psychologists” to help them negotiate with his administration in an effort to end the U.S. war against Iran.

IRAN FOUND TRUMP'S BONESPUR

Bret Stephens says Trump betrayed conservatives who supported him taking on Iran. He started a war, but when it got hard, he backed down.

THE VIETNAM EXCUSE

MEDICAL RECORD

Diagnosis:
Bone Spurs

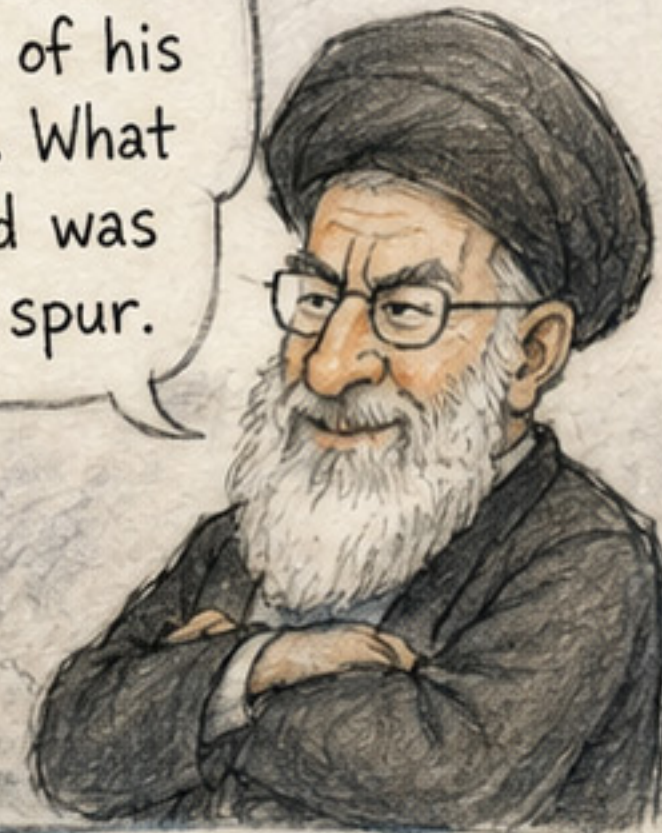

[Signature]

Trump avoided the Vietnam War by getting a doctor to say he had bone spurs so he didn't have to fight.

Too risky!
I'm out!

We took the measure of his courage. What we found was a bone spur.

WHAT STEPHENS SAYS:

- Trump started the war but didn't finish it.
- He got spooked when things got tough and energy prices went up.
- He made threats, then backed down — again and again.
- Iran saw his weakness and won the contest of wills.

Trump promised to stand with the Iranian people after they were massacred in protests in January.

Now, Stephens says, his deal is his worst betrayal.

Stephens believes Trump's lack of courage and indecision led to a bad deal — and a betrayal of his promise.
